Heirloom Decor: where the next sales might be hiding

Amir, I spent some time going through your store. It's already in better shape than most vintage dealers' sites, so this isn't a "you need a new website" note. It's a list of the things I'd look at next, most useful first. Most of it you can do yourself. Take what's useful and ignore the rest.

FROM SHAWN · BRISTOL BUSINESS SYSTEMS LOOKED AT 29 OCT 2026

PUBLIC STOREFRONT ONLY

The store today

57 pieces in stock right now	$104k combined asking price of in-stock pieces	$1,650 median asking price (range $100–$4,500)
503 sold pieces in “What You Missed”	11 photos on a typical product page	161 / 250 recent products with no product type set

What's already working

Product pages that answer questions

Detailed descriptions, condition notes, exact measurements, and many photos per piece.

Clear delivery terms

Insured freight estimate ($449–599), lead times, free local pickup, and a 48-hour inspection window.

Pay over time is already on

Shop Pay Installments shows monthly payments on product pages. That matters a lot at your price points.

The right tools installed

Klaviyo, a Meta Pixel, a Google tag and Pinterest are all on the site, plus a premium theme (Copenhagen) and real blog content.

Six ideas, most useful first

Each one comes from something I saw on the live site. None of them needs a rebuild.

01

Send Instagram followers to an early-access list, not just the feed

HIGH IMPACT | 1–2 WEEKS

Seen: "Our Instagram is the fastest way to see new finds. Some never make it to the website."

When a piece sells through a DM, you don't get the buyer's email, your ads never learn from that sale, and it's harder to sell to that person again. The demand from Instagram is real. It's worth bringing it back through something you own.

> IDEA
> A Klaviyo "First Look" list by email and text that gets new arrivals 24 hours before everyone else. Add "notify me of similar pieces" sign-ups on sold items. Put the link in your Instagram bio and Stories.

02

Put the 503 sold pieces to work

HIGH IMPACT | 2–3 WEEKS

Seen: a large sold archive with no next step for the visitor.

Every sold listing proves you find hard-to-get pieces. Right now someone who loves a sold Kjærnulf set has nowhere to go.

> IDEA
> A “Find me one like this” request on sold pages. Designer and maker pages (Kjærnulf, Omann Jun, Pearsall, Ekornes, Folke Ohlsson) that rank in search and show what's in stock. A short trade page for interior designers.

03

Clean up product data so Shopping ads can work

MEDIUM IMPACT | 1 WEEK

Seen: 161 of the 250 most recent products have no product type. Designer names are stored inconsistently as the vendor.

Google Shopping, Meta catalog ads, Pinterest, and your own store filters all depend on this data. Without it, a search for “Danish teak sideboard” has less to match against.

> IDEA
> A consistent product type for every item, Google product categories, and designer, maker, material and era as metafields. Then connect the Google & YouTube and Pinterest sales channels.

04

Show more proof from past buyers

MEDIUM IMPACT | UNDER 1 WEEK

Seen: one testimonial on the homepage and no reviews app.

Someone spending $2,000 on a piece they've never touched wants to hear from people like them. Angela's testimonial about a table delivered to New York City is exactly the kind of thing that helps.

> IDEA
> An automatic review request after delivery, store reviews plus your Google reviews on the site, and customer photos of pieces in their homes where buyers are happy to share.

05

Give the homepage a search-friendly title

MEDIUM IMPACT | UNDER 1 HOUR

Seen: the homepage title is just "Heirloom Decor" and there's no meta description.

The homepage is your strongest page in search, and right now it tells Google almost nothing about what you sell or where you are.

> IDEA
> Title: "Vintage Danish & Mid-Century Modern Furniture | Heirloom Decor, Vermont." A description that mentions the Williston showroom and nationwide shipping. Same for each collection page.

06

Tidy a few loose ends

LOW IMPACT | AN AFTERNOON

- "Rugs" is in the main menu but has no products. Maybe hide it until stock arrives.
- The live theme is named "Policy Sync (Staging: homepage cleanup)." Worth checking it's the version you meant to publish, and keeping an untouched backup copy.
- The Meta Pixel is installed. Check the Conversions API is also on in the Facebook & Instagram channel. Without it, iPhone and ad-blocked visitors are mostly invisible to your ads.

If you run ads

Every piece is one of a kind, so ads work best when they sell your eye and keep up with new arrivals on their own. An ad for a single item stops working the day it sells.

Meta	Retarget people who viewed products in the last 30–60 days, since buyers at these prices take weeks to decide. Reels of new arrivals and restorations. Lookalikes of past buyers in New England and the New York City area. Small radius campaigns around Burlington and Williston for weekend showroom hours.
Pinterest	A natural fit for mid-century furniture searches, and few vintage dealers advertise there. Fill boards from the product catalog and promote pieces styled in rooms.
Google	Shopping and Performance Max for searches like “vintage teak credenza” or a designer's name, once the product data in idea 03 is fixed.
Email & text	Probably your best return, and you already pay for Klaviyo. Flows for welcome, abandoned cart, browse abandonment, post-purchase review and win-back, plus the weekly First Look send.

Bringing people to the Williston showroom

Two jobs here: bring people in on Saturdays and Sundays from 11 to 5, and get Vermonters offering you pieces to buy, because good sourcing matters as much as selling.

Free basics first

- Google Business Profile: weekend hours, a booking link, 20+ showroom and product photos, and a weekly “just arrived” post.
- Ask every local pickup customer for a Google review. Reviews move map rankings more than anything else.
- A “Visit the showroom” page for searches like “vintage furniture Burlington VT,” with directions and parking.
- Claim Apple Maps, Bing and Yelp so the details match everywhere.

Vermont channels	• Front Porch Forum: "new this weekend" posts in Williston, Burlington, South Burlington, Shelburne, Essex and Charlotte. • Seven Days: small ads near home and design coverage, and a story pitch built on your before/after restorations. • Facebook Marketplace: selected pieces with a pointer to the showroom, to reach buyers who never search for a store.
Partnerships	• Real estate agents and home stagers: staging loans or rentals, and closing-gift vouchers. • Interior designers and architects: trade pricing and private previews before pieces go online. • Second-home and rental owners in Stowe, Shelburne and around the lake: furnishing packages for ski condos and lake houses. • Cafés and restaurants: a few placed pieces tagged "furnished by Heirloom Decor."
Showroom events	• A monthly First Look Saturday: new pieces shown in person first, announced by email, Instagram and Front Porch Forum. • A short restoration talk, such as "How to spot real Danish teak." • Seasonal open houses around the holidays and ski season.
Small paid push	Meta ads within 25–30 miles of Williston, Thursday through Saturday, with "Open this weekend, 11–5." A small Google budget on "furniture store near me." About $300–600 a month is enough to test it.
Sourcing	A "We buy mid-century furniture" page, shared on Front Porch Forum, plus relationships with estate-sale companies and estate attorneys.
Measuring it	Track Google profile calls, direction requests and bookings, local pickup orders, and ask "How did you hear about us?" at checkout and in the showroom.

Where I'd start

THIS WEEK

Quick wins

- Homepage & collection titles
- Pixel and Conversions API check
- Loose ends from idea 06
- Google Business Profile tune-up

THIS MONTH

Systems

- First Look list and Klaviyo flows
- Product data cleanup
- Shopping channels connected
- Review requests

LATER

Growth

- Ads on Meta, Pinterest and Google
- Designer pages and content
- Local partnerships and showroom events
- Watch which channels bring sales

How this was made: I looked at the public storefront and its product and collection data on 29 October 2026. I couldn't see your sales, traffic, ad accounts or Klaviyo settings, so some of this may already be in place. If so, just skip it.

Happy to talk any of it through. Shawn · (802) 377-3369 · contact@bristolbusinesssystems.com
