STORE & MARKETING AUDIT · HEIRLOOMDECORSHOP.COM

Heirloom Decor: where the next sales are hiding

The store is already in better shape than most vintage dealers'. So this audit skips the redesign pitch. It lists the specific changes most likely to turn more of your traffic and Instagram following into sales.

PREPARED BY BRISTOL BUSINESS SYSTEMS REVIEWED 29 OCT 2026

PUBLIC STOREFRONT ONLY WILLISTON, VT

The store today

57 pieces in stock right now	$104k combined asking price of in-stock pieces	$1,650 median asking price (range $100–$4,500)
503 sold pieces in “What You Missed”	11 photos on a typical product page	161 / 250 recent products with no product type set

What's already working

Product pages that answer questions

Detailed descriptions, condition notes, exact measurements, and many photos per piece.

Real content

Recent guides on choosing Danish dining chairs and buying vintage as an investment, plus before/after restoration photos.

Clear delivery terms

Insured freight estimate ($449–599), lead times, free local pickup, and a 48-hour inspection window.

The right tools installed

Klaviyo, a Meta Pixel, a Google tag and Pinterest are all on the site, and a premium theme (Copenhagen) is in use.

Seven opportunities, highest impact first

Each one is something we saw on the live site. None of them needs a rebuild.

01

Offer pay-over-time on $1,500+ pieces

HIGH IMPACT | UNDER 1 HOUR

Seen: no Shop Pay Installments, Affirm or Afterpay messaging on product pages or at checkout.

Most of the stock sits between $1,650 and $2,800 before freight. At that price, showing “or $140/month” on the product page turns a someday purchase into a this-week one. It also keeps buyers from leaving to compare prices on Chairish.

> FIX
>
> Turn on Shop Pay Installments in Shopify Payments and add the price-breakdown widget under the product price.

02

Send Instagram followers to an early-access list, not just the feed

HIGH IMPACT | 1–2 WEEKS

Seen: “Our Instagram is the fastest way to see new finds. Some never make it to the website.”

When a piece sells through a DM, you lose the customer's email, your ads never learn from that sale, and you can't sell to that buyer again easily. The demand from Instagram is real. It needs to come back through systems you own.

>
> Run a Klaviyo “First Look” list by email and SMS that gets new arrivals 24 hours before the public. Add back-in-stock and “notify me of similar pieces” sign-ups to sold items. Post the link in your Instagram bio and Stories.

03

Put the 503 sold pieces to work

HIGH IMPACT | 2–3 WEEKS

Seen: a large sold archive with no next step for the visitor.

Every sold listing is proof that you find hard-to-get pieces. Right now a visitor who loves a sold Kjærnulf set has nowhere to go.

>
> Add a “Find me one like this” sourcing request to sold pages. Build designer and maker pages (Kjærnulf, Omann Jun, Pearsall, Ekornes, Folke Ohlsson) that rank in search and show what's in stock. Add a short trade program page for interior designers.

04

Clean up product data so Shopping ads can work

MEDIUM IMPACT | 1 WEEK

Seen: 161 of the 250 most recent products have no product type. Designer names are stored inconsistently as the vendor.

Google Shopping, Meta catalog ads, Pinterest, and the store's own filters all depend on this data. Without it, a search for “Danish teak sideboard” has less to match against.

>
> Set a consistent product type for every item, add Google product categories, and store designer, maker, material and era as metafields. Then connect the Google & YouTube and Pinterest sales channels.

05

Show more proof from past buyers

MEDIUM IMPACT | UNDER 1 WEEK

Seen: one testimonial on the homepage and no reviews app.

Buyers spending $2,000 on a piece they've never touched want to hear from people like them. The existing testimonial from Angela, who bought a table delivered to New York City, is a strong example of what helps.

> FIX
> Send an automatic post-delivery review request, and display store reviews plus your Google reviews. Add customer photos of pieces in their homes where buyers allow it.

06

Give the homepage a search-friendly title

MEDIUM IMPACT | UNDER 1 HOUR

Seen: the homepage title is just "Heirloom Decor" and it has no meta description.

The homepage is your strongest page in search. At the moment it tells Google almost nothing about what you sell or where you are.

> FIX
> Title: "Vintage Danish & Mid-Century Modern Furniture | Heirloom Decor, Vermont." Add a description that mentions the Williston showroom and nationwide shipping. Do the same for each collection page.

07

Tidy a few loose ends

LOW IMPACT | AN AFTERNOON

- "Rugs" is in the main menu but has no products. Hide it until stock arrives.
- The live theme is named "Policy Sync (Staging: homepage cleanup)." Check that the intended version is the published one, and keep an untouched backup copy.
- The Meta Pixel is installed. Confirm the Conversions API is also on in the Facebook & Instagram channel. Without it, iPhone and ad-blocked visitors are largely invisible to your ads.

Advertising plan

One thing shapes all of it: every piece is one of a kind. Ads should sell the shop's eye and keep up with new arrivals automatically, because ads for a single item stop working the day it sells.

Meta	Retarget people who viewed products in the last 30–60 days, since buyers at these prices take weeks to decide. Run Reels of new arrivals and restorations. Target lookalikes of past buyers in New England and the New York City area. Run small radius campaigns around Burlington and Williston promoting weekend showroom hours.
Pinterest	A natural fit for mid-century furniture searches, and few vintage dealers advertise there. Fill your boards from the product catalog and promote pieces styled in rooms.
Google	Shopping and Performance Max for high-intent searches such as “vintage teak credenza” or a designer's name, once the product data from item 04 is fixed.
Email & SMS	The highest-return channel you already pay for. Set up flows for welcome, abandoned cart, browse abandonment, post-purchase review, and win-back, plus the weekly First Look send.

Local plan for the Williston showroom

Local marketing has two jobs here. It should bring people in on Saturdays and Sundays from 11 to 5. It should also get Vermonters offering you pieces to buy, because good sourcing matters as much as selling.

Free basics first

- Google Business Profile: correct weekend hours, a booking link, 20+ showroom and product photos, and a weekly “just arrived” post.
- Ask every local pickup customer for a Google review. Reviews move map rankings more than anything else.
- Add a “Visit the showroom” page that targets searches like “vintage furniture Burlington VT,” with directions and parking.
- Claim Apple Maps, Bing and Yelp so the details match everywhere.

Vermont channels

- Front Porch Forum: “new this weekend” posts in Williston, Burlington, South Burlington, Shelburne, Essex and Charlotte.
- Seven Days: small ads around home and design coverage, and a story pitch built on the before/after restorations.
- Facebook Marketplace: list selected pieces with a pointer to the showroom to reach buyers who never search for a store.

Partnerships

- Real estate agents and home stagers: staging loans or rentals, and closing-gift vouchers.
- Interior designers and architects: trade pricing and private previews before pieces go online.
- Second-home and short-term rental owners in Stowe, Shelburne and around the lake: furnishing packages for ski condos and lake houses.
- Cafés and restaurants: a few placed pieces tagged “furnished by Heirloom Decor.”

Showroom events

- A monthly First Look Saturday: new pieces shown in person first, announced by email, Instagram and Front Porch Forum.
- A short restoration talk, such as “How to spot real Danish teak.”
- Seasonal open houses around the holidays and ski season.

Small paid push	Meta ads within 25–30 miles of Williston, run Thursday through Saturday with "Open this weekend, 11–5." Add a small Google budget on "furniture store near me" searches. About $300–600 a month is enough to test the area.
Sourcing	A "We buy mid-century furniture" page, promoted on Front Porch Forum and to local homeowners, plus relationships with estate-sale companies and estate attorneys. That brings in better stock than auctions do.
Measuring it	Track Google profile calls, direction requests and bookings, local pickup orders, and a "How did you hear about us?" question at checkout and in the showroom. Give each channel its own promo code.

How we'd work together

WEEK 1

Quick wins

- Pay-over-time switched on
- Homepage & collection titles
- Pixel and Conversions API check
- Loose ends from item 07
- Google Business Profile tune-up

MONTH 1

Systems

- First Look list and Klaviyo flows
- Product data cleanup
- Shopping channels connected
- Reviews set up

ONGOING

Growth

- Meta, Pinterest and Google ads managed
- Designer pages and content
- Local channels, partnerships and showroom events
- Monthly report on revenue by channel

How this was made: a review of the public storefront and its product and collection data on 29 October 2026. Without admin access we couldn't see sales, traffic, ad accounts or Klaviyo settings. Those would come first in a full engagement.
